RE: P2P Alliance Petition for Clarification CG Docket No. 02-278

Dear Ms. Dortch:

I am a consumer and was unaware of the existence of this petition until recently and prior to this past election cycle of 2018, really had no awareness of the process known as peer-to-peer texting.

However, beginning in September 2018 I was bombarded with politically oriented text messages on behalf of a variety of candidates and concerns. Most senders ignored my text in response asking them to identify themselves but one sender did reply with this quite telling message: "We text since so many people don't answer their phones or their doors anymore".

I also had occasion to speak to several friends during this same time who shared their annoyance at receiving some of these identical text messages. In fact, I am now aware that enough people were annoyed to have filed TCPA claims and/or class action lawsuits against a number of the same entities that texted me.

I'm urging the Commission to consider that consumers largely find these unwanted text messages - even those utilizing P2P technology - to be an annoyance and a nuisance as they take up time to manage but they also take up data space on cell phones.

Sincerely,

Diana Mey
